Innovations in Diversity: Five Pilot Programs to Promote Diversity within Law Firms and How Legal Departments Are Supporting Them

What happens when 54 partners from major law firms work together (virtually) in teams of six (each with two experts and a law student) to generate innovative ideas to achieve greater retention and advancement of experienced women and other diverse lawyers? That was the question for the Women in Law Hackathon held in 2016. Learn about the innovative pilot programs that evolved from the Hackathon, why over 40 firms have signed on to commit to at least one of these innovative programs and what three dozen legal departments are doing to support these law firms. Managing partners of law firms, law firm practice group and diversity leaders, and legal department heads will want to know and learn about these innovative solutions.

Don't be left behind. Breakfast will be served.

Spin-Offs and Carve-Outs:

Tackling Complex Legal Issues While Slicing and Dicing the Target Company for the Benefit of Buyer and Seller

Increased shareholder activism and a desire to return value to shareholders while focusing on core business strategies has resulted in the continued uptick in spin-off and carve-out transactions by sellers. At the same time, strategic and private equity buyers are looking to unlock hidden value from under-performing assets and divisions. This experienced panel will discuss the challenges for these transactions, including addressing the target’s ability to operate independently. Highlights will include separating assets not easily divided, tackling intellectual property rights on a go-forward basis, avoiding missteps with contractual assignments, addressing the ongoing relationship between buyer and seller under a transition services agreement, and communicating with key stakeholders.
